1. At the present time there are about 250 Yugoslav students in Prague, 200 on fellowships and 50 by private means.
2. More than one-half of the stipendists are members of the Communist Party. They attempt to influence the non-Communists, and observe the behavior of students who finance their own studies and are looked upon as reactionaries. Twice weekly "political discussions" are held. No criticism of the Tito regime has ever been expressed, although it is opposed by many of the private students. If any of the non-Communists fail in their studies, their passports are withdrawn and they must return to Yugoslavia.
